Acknowledgment of country

We acknowledge the Tasmanian Aboriginal people and their enduring custodianship of lutruwita (Tasmania).

We honour their uninterrupted care, protection and belonging to these islands, skies and waterways, before the invasion and colonisation of European settlement.

As part of a tourism industry that welcomes visitors to these lands, we acknowledge our responsibility to represent to our visitors Tasmania's deep and complex history, fully, respectfully, and truthfully.

We acknowledge the Aboriginal people who continue to care for this country today.

We pay our respects to their Elders, past and present.

We honour their stories, songs, art, and culture, and their aspirations for the future of their people and these lands.

WHY TASMANIA

TASMANIA IS NO ORDINARY PLACE...
AND TASMANIANS ARE NO ORDINARY PEOPLE.

SLOW DOWN. UNPLUG. BREATHE DEEPLY.

— A journey to Tasmania is a rare chance to disconnect from stress and reconnect with the things that matter.

About 40% of the island state is protected as national parks, reserves and the UNESCO Tasmanian Wilderness World Heritage Area – and remarkably, most of these wild places are easily accessible. Hike the tallest sea cliffs in the Southern Hemisphere and breathe some of the purest air in the world. Follow wild rivers into rare temperate rainforest where Huon pines grow for thousands of years. Cross buttongrass plains below snow-peaked mountains and meet wildlife that exists nowhere else on Earth.

Geographic isolation has nurtured Tasmania's unique environment, and has fostered a rare community of creative, down-to-earth, resourceful people with time to make you feel welcome. This is a place where biodiversity and hospitality go hand in hand.

One of the joys of travelling in Tasmania is not just the chance to taste produce straight from the farm, the ocean, the winery or the distillery...but also to meet the makers at cellar doors, farm gates and local markets. And with four distinct seasons, there's always something new to see, taste and feel here.

Tasmania is also a place for adventure, however you spin it. Test yourself on epic mountain-bike trails, tee off on top-ranked golf courses overlooking Bass Strait, cast for wild brown trout in glacial tarns, or raft along wild rivers.

Or, if you're feeling more sedate, experience Tasmania's unique convict-built architecture – stately homesteads, elegant bridges and haunting prison ruins offering a window into the hardships of the past.

Heritage, adventure, wildlife, wild places and fine food and drink: plan your next move from a hot tub in a forest, a kayak for two, or fireside with a local whisky and some good friends. The world looks very different from Tasmania.

Where we are

Australia's only island state lies about 250km across the formidable Bass Strait from Victoria. Next stop south is Antarctica, 3000km away. Surrounded by the Tasman Sea, the strait and the mighty Southern Ocean, Tasmanians breathe some of the cleanest air in the world. The 334 islands of the Tasmanian archipelago sit at latitude 42°S, directly in the path of the Roaring Forties winds.

Tasmania is about the same size as the Republic of Ireland: 315km from east to west and 286km from north to south. There are around 573,000 Tasmanians with almost half living in the state capital of Hobart, established in 1804 and Australia's second-oldest city.

Weather

Tasmania's four distinct seasons deliver different travel experiences year-round. Average maximum temperatures in summer, from December to March, are 17–23°C (63–73°F). Average maximum winter temperatures, from June to August, are 3–11°C (37–52°F). Enjoy beach life and blooming lavender fields in summer, the 'turning of the fagus' in autumn when Australia's only native deciduous tree turns brilliant colours, fish for wild brown trout in spring, and in winter join solstice festivals and warm up around log fires with fine Tassie whisky.

Rainfall varies significantly across the island. Hobart is the second-driest capital city in Australia (after Adelaide), while the west coast has an annual average rainfall of 2400mm, which sustains the island's cool temperate rainforests.

No matter when you travel here, it's important to prepare for sudden changes in the weather, and especially if you're bushwalking. Pack warm, fast-drying layers for maximum flexibility, particularly in the cooler months, and be sure to carry extra warm clothing and a waterproof jacket.

Getting here

From mainland Australia, there are direct domestic flights into Hobart and Launceston from most capital cities. The Spirit of Tasmania passenger and vehicle ferries operate daily across Bass Strait between Geelong and Devonport on Tasmania's north-west coast.

Getting around

Tasmania is prime road-trip territory, with diverse landscapes and excellent road coverage – and never more than a few hours between A and B. Visitors can hire cars or vans, bring their own vehicle from the mainland on the Spirit of Tasmania ferry, or join a coach tour or a small escorted group. There are also intercity and regional public bus services.

Rainbow accredited businesses

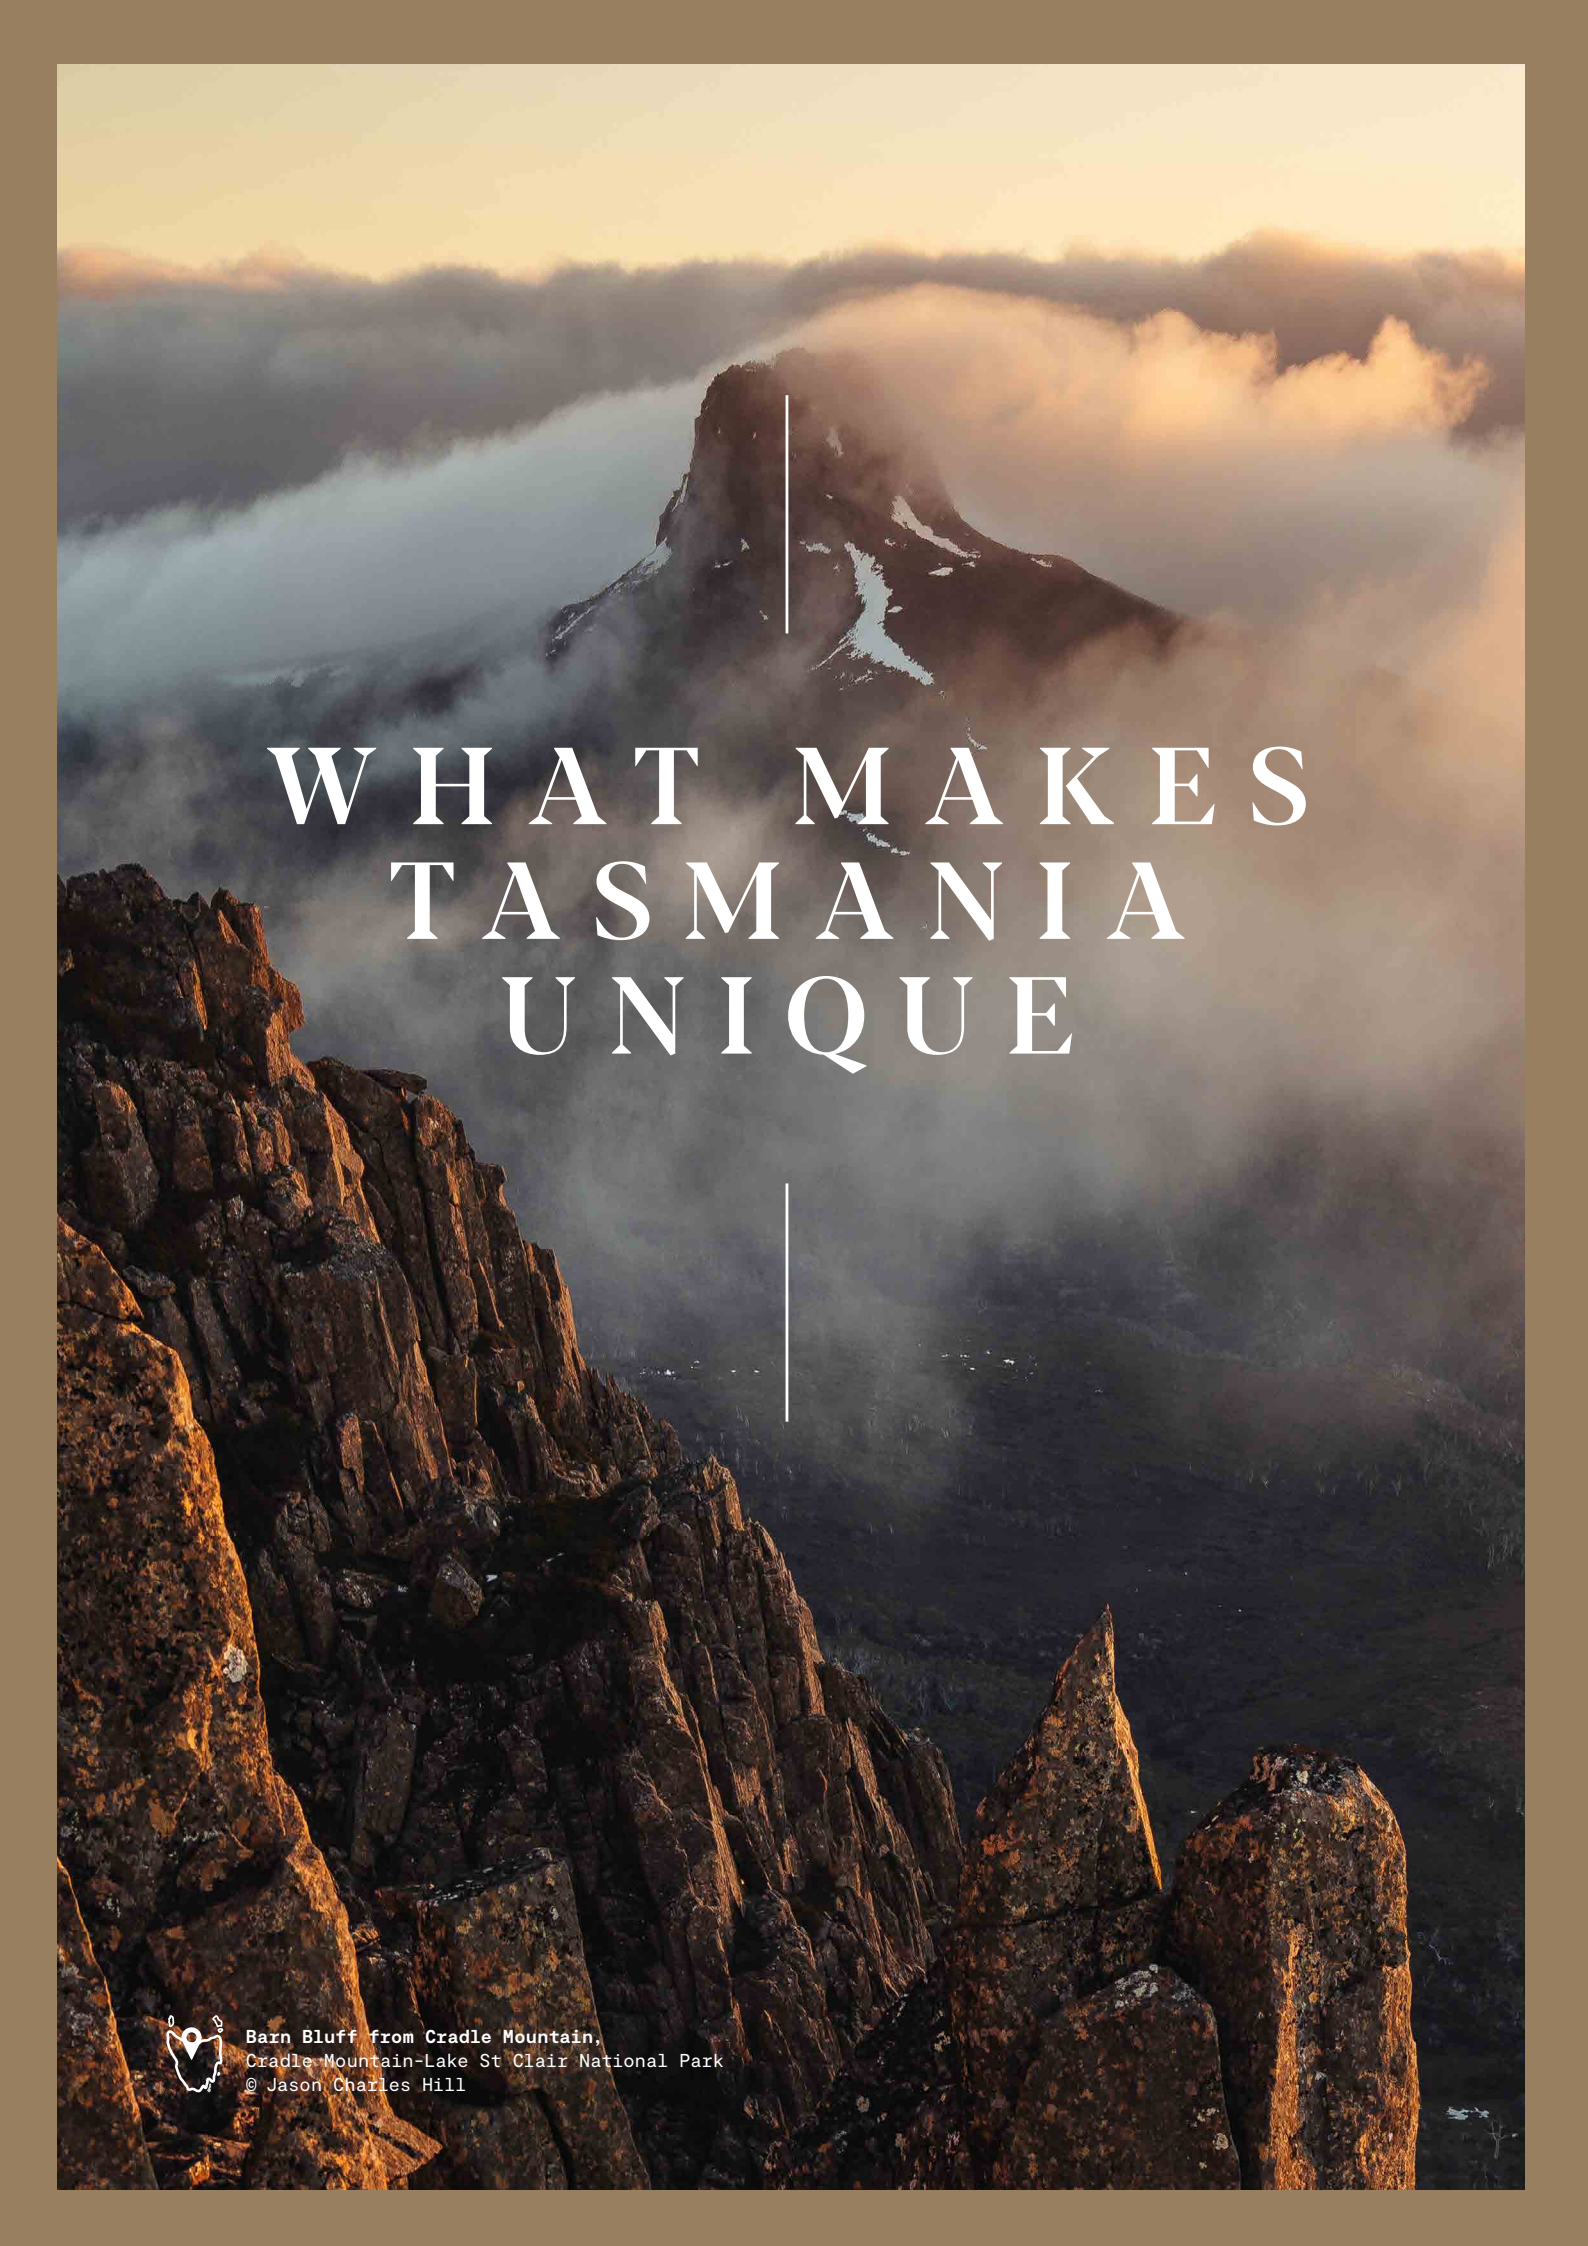

Businesses across the island have undertaken training to create safe spaces for LGBTQIA+ travellers. For a full list of Rainbow Tasmania Tourism Accredited operators, visit discovertasmania.com.au/rainbow-accredited.

Arts, culture and events

Wild terrain, fascinating history and try-anything spirit infuse Tasmania with creative energy, inspiring a community of artists, designers and performers. Mona, the provocative private Museum of Old and New Art in Hobart, presents an alternative universe of ideas and expression, and a diverse range of exhibitions and seasonal events connecting travellers to island life – including the offbeat offerings of Dark Mofo in winter and summer gatherings such as Cygnet Folk Festival and Clarence Jazz Festival.

Other eclectic events around the state include the National Penny Farthing Championships in Evandale in February; Tassie Scallop Fiesta, Festival of Voices and Tasmanian Whisky Week in winter; and the finish of the annual Rolex Sydney Hobart Yacht Race on the Hobart waterfront, just in time for the New Year's Eve fireworks.

Wilderness and wildlife

Tasmania's many wilderness areas are a living museum of plants and animals, including a relatively large number of endemic species, found nowhere else on Earth. The island's unique ecology has evolved in isolation, created when sea levels rose at the end of the last Ice Age some 12,000 years ago, separating Tasmania from the rest of Australia.

With habitats relatively intact and few introduced predators or pests, Tasmania is now a refuge for a fascinating crew of creatures, including platypuses and echidnas (egg-laying mammals, called monotremes) and marsupials including wombats, wallabies, spotted quolls and the endangered Tasmanian devil. The last known thylacine – aka the Tasmanian tiger – died in a Hobart zoo in 1936, and the Tasmanian government officially declared the species extinct in 1986. However, unconfirmed sightings continue to this day...

Many of Tasmania's animals are nocturnal and elusive, though a walk at dawn or dusk will often reward the patient observer. Or you can visit one of the island's many wildlife sanctuaries for tours and close encounters. Top spots include:

- Bonorong Wildlife Sanctuary in Brighton
- Trowunna Wildlife Sanctuary at Mole Creek
- Devils @ Cradle at Cradle Mountain
- East Coast Natureworld at Bicheno
- Platypus House at Beauty Point; and
- Tasmanian Devil Unzoo on Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula.

And don't forget to look up! Aside from towering Eucalyptus regnans trees, which can grow to 100m tall, Tasmania is one of the few places in the world to see the glimmering Aurora Australis, the magical Southern Lights. Year-round sightings anywhere on the island are possible, though long dark winter nights in the southern region offer the best chance.

Tasmania's Top 5 animals

TASMANIAN DEVIL

Sharp teeth, a devilish cry and an irritable disposition – plus a bite as strong as a Bengal tiger. The world's largest carnivorous marsupial, the size of a small dog, has a fearsome reputation. But these nocturnal hunters are endangered: your best chance of seeing one is at a wildlife park.

PLATYPUS

The shy platypus, with its webbed feet and peculiar 'duck bill', burrows into the banks of freshwater rivers and lakes around the state, including the Hobart Rivulet. Look for a tell-tale trail of bubbles across the surface and keep quiet – you might have a lucky sighting.

WOMBAT

About the size of a chunky sports bag, a wombat on the march is a curious sight – a muscular, waddling creature with squat legs and a stubby tail. Maria Island National Park off the east coast is a great spot to spy one, munching grass and producing cube-shaped dung.

SPOTTED QUOLL

Tasmania's tree-climbing spotted quoll is another carnivorous marsupial, related to the Tasmanian devil and extinct thylacine. They're shy and nocturnal, and are far from picky eaters: insects, roadkill, rats, rabbits, birds and lizards are all on the menu. Meet one at a wildlife park.

PADEMELO

Like a wallaby, only smaller and with pointier features, this unique creature can be found quite commonly throughout Tasmania, often grazing on grass and darting through scrub. Other commonly spotted Tasmanian animals include endearing echidnas and bouncing Bennett's wallabies.

Unordinary adventures

Whatever your adventurous passion, Tasmania is the place to pursue it.

WALKING

Tasmania is criss-crossed by 2800km of managed hiking tracks and more than 880 walks in national parks, reserves and conservation areas. You can stretch out on one of the 60 Great Short Walks, tackle a challenging DIY multi-day bushwalk, or sign up for a luxe guided hike with fine food and accommodation. Popular trails include the 65km Overland Track, the short-but-steep Wineglass Bay walk in Freycinet National Park, the 46km Three Capes Track on Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula, and the legendary 85km South Coast Track across the bottom of the island.

FLY FISHING

Arguably the world's purest strain of wild brown trout thrives in more than 3000 Tasmanian waterways, from fresh highland lakes and broad southern rivers to northern meadow streams. In the August-to-April season, crystal-clear water delivers superb sight fishing (...seeing the fish and casting to it, rather than guessing where it is).

MOUNTAIN BIKE RIDING

Tasmania has a global reputation as an exceptional mountain biking destination, with hundreds of kilometres of trails, loops and downhill runs. Key locations include:

- Derby and St Helens Mountain Bike Trails, both in the north east
- Wild Mersey Mountain Bike Trails in the north west
- Maydena Bike Park in the Derwent Valley
- Queenstown's challenging Mt Owen network on the west coast; and
- Zeehan's Heemskirk network, Silver City MTB.

GOLF

Tasmania is known for its unique links golf courses lining the rugged coastlines, with greens scattered through sand dunes and surrounded by paddocks grazed by sheep. Tasmania has four of Australia's top 13 golf courses, as ranked by Australian Golf Digest: Barnbougle Dunes and Barnbougle Lost Farm at Bridport in the north, and Cape Wickham Golf Links and Ocean Dunes on King Island.

History and heritage

Tasmania's human history dates back many thousands of years. Visit the Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery (TMAG) in Hobart or the Queen Victoria Museum and Art Gallery (QVMAG) in Launceston to learn more about palawa (Tasmanian Aboriginal) history, culture and ongoing custodianship of Country. You can also deepen your understanding of palawa stories and connection through guided experiences on Country, such as the wukalina Walk in the Irapuna / Bay of Fires area; palawa kipli, focusing on Tasmanian Aboriginal food and bush tucker experiences; and Launceston's kooparooka niara Tours, taking visitors on a cultural tour into Cataract Gorge.

Much of Tasmania's rich and complex European history is tangible in streetscapes, gardens, houses and farms across the state. Notably, there are more than 1000 convict sites here – evocative open-air museums where visitors can learn about the 76,000 convicts transported to Tasmania (known then as Van Diemen's Land) between 1804 and 1853.

Five of these sites are part of Australia's 11 UNESCO World Heritage convict sites, recognised for their universal historic value:

- Darlington Probation Station on Maria Island National Park
- Port Arthur Historic Site on Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula
- Coal Mines Historic Site, also on Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula
- Cascades Female Factory in Hobart; and
- Brickendon and Woolmers Estates in rural Longford.

Tasmania's industrial and mining heritage is also a riveting read. Across the state you can visit former mining towns reborn as mountain-bike meccas and arts hubs; marvel at a colossal concrete hydroelectric dam; and tour mines of yesteryear.

Food, wine and whisky

Hungry? Tasmania offers a growing collection of paddock-to-plate experiences, food, wine, beer and spirits trails, cooking schools and gourmet walking tours, allowing travellers to forage, cook, taste and learn about Tasmanian produce first-hand.

Tasmania's prolific produce flows from the island's fertile soils and seas, clean water, strong biosecurity practices and GMO-free status, and the rhythm of four distinct seasons. Slow down and pick a few apples – there's a 200-year history of growing, canning and fermenting apples here. In summer, gather cherries and raspberries at farms across the north and south. In winter, follow the truffle hounds on a hunt to unearth some of these funky fungi.

Expect great seafood year-round, including wild-caught abalone. Peak season for scallops and oysters is winter, while rock lobsters – known locally as crayfish – are abundant in summer. The roll-call of star produce from the island's north and north west includes grass-fed beef from Kennaook / Cape Grim and King Island, Robbins Island wagyu, and Pyengana cloth-matured cheddar. Inhale the scent of a rare temperate rainforest in leatherwood honey: intense, floral and found only in Tasmania.

Time for a drink? Follow one of the island's four regional wine trails and taste cool-climate wines at cellar doors ranging from heritage stables to designer sheds. Tasmania is particularly known for its pinot noir and sparkling wines, as well as small-batch whisky, cider, beer, gin and vodka. Island distillers are a resourceful bunch – making paddock-to-bottle rye whisky in DIY stills fuelled by biodiesel, flavouring gin with native mountain peppercorn, and distilling vodka from sheep's whey.

Tasmanian single malt whisky is a standout, receiving global accolades. Making whisky here may seem like an obvious pursuit, with clean mountain waters, abundant barley crops and misty highland vibes. But distilling was outlawed on the island in 1838, and it was more than 150 years before anyone other than the odd moonshiner made whisky here. The antiquated laws were repealed in 1992, and the industry has since exploded: today there are more than 50 Tasmanian whisky distilleries, many of which are open for tours and tastings.

Road trips

Tasmania's diverse landscapes, compact size and excellent road network make the island state a prime self-drive destination. You can dash between Hobart and Launceston in two hours, but why rush? The pleasure of driving in Tasmania is taking some time to explore villages, meet the locals, take walks and stop at farm gates and cellar doors along the way.

The island has five well-signposted drive journeys: the Great Eastern Drive on the east coast; Northern Forage across northern Tasmania; Western Wilds in the west; Southern Edge in the south; and Heartlands in central Tasmania.

SOUTHERN * EDGE

For every epic landscape in southern Tasmania, there's a seascape to match – or a deep, wide river running through it. Southern Edge road trips are framed by the edges of river and sea. Follow country roads past the hidden coves of the broad D'Entrecasteaux Channel; swing by the farm gates and cider houses of the Huon Valley; and detour by ferry for just-shucked oysters and farmhouse cheeses on Bruny Island. Venture to Australia's southernmost edge (next stop Antarctica), and into the south-west wilderness. Look forward to wildlife watching, just-harvested produce, stargazing and solitude.

NORTHERN FORAGE

Framed by wild Bass Strait coastlines, threaded by rivers and thatched by some of the most fertile farmland in Australia, a Northern Forage road trip is a chance to slow down and follow your foodie instincts from paddock to plate. Stop at farm gates, distilleries and cellar doors along the way for tastings and to meet the makers. Linger in rural villages and quirky coastal towns. Marvel at the monumental landmarks of The Nut and Table Cape. Plunge deep into wilderness then plot your way out again – from ocean to valley and forest to farm, foraging from breakfast to dinner.

HEARTLANDS

A journey through central Tasmania can span a couple of hours or a couple of thousand years: a Heartlands road trip has a way of nudging your sense of time and history in unexpected directions. Detour along convict-built roads past Georgian facades in heritage towns. Follow country lanes hemmed by hedgerows, past paddocks that have produced fine merino wool for generations. Venture into the Central Highlands and north to the Great Western Tiers – wild, ancient landscapes of lakes, mountains and moors steeped in more recent hydro-industrial history.

ghost towns and streets studded with ornate Victorian and Art Deco architecture. Climb aboard a steam train through rainforest, and raft the rivers. Chat with locals, marvel at a mighty dam wall and drive the 99 Bends. Facing the Roaring Forties winds, fresh from South America, discover a place like nowhere else.

GREAT EASTERN DRIVE

Road trips along Tasmania's east coast pass through laidback hinterland villages and classic beach-holiday towns, strung together by uncrowded shores and photo-worthy national parks. The perfect arc of Wineglass

Bay is an east-coast essential – as is the magical combo of white sand, turquoise ocean and orange boulders in the Irapuna / Bay of Fires area. Venture across open heathland, along forest trails or out to Maria Island National Park. Embrace simple luxuries – pull over and follow a beach track, soak in a hot tub with water views, order catch-of-the-day at a seafood shack, then fall asleep to an ocean soundtrack.

WESTERN WILDS

Tasmania's west protects a huge area of globally recognised wilderness – the UNESCO Tasmanian Wilderness World Heritage Area. Less well-known are the human stories of the region: tales of Aboriginal culture dating back thousands of years; of pioneering challenge, folly and grand vision; of mining booms and busts. A Western Wilds road trip takes you through remote landscapes,

Turrakana / Tasman Peninsula

This craggy peninsula plays host to the haunting Port Arthur Historic Site, 300m-high sea cliffs and the epic Three Capes Track. Access is via Teralina / Eaglehawk Neck, a 30m-wide isthmus once guarded by dogs to deter convict escapees.

Bruny Island

Catch the ferry across the D'Entrecasteaux Channel to Bruny, known for its coastal walks, bird and marine life, and outstanding produce – particularly oysters, artisanal cheese, craft beer and smallgoods.

Huon Valley

Pass apple orchards, vineyards, waterways and riverside towns until you reach tall forests and peaks of the Tasmanian Wilderness World Heritage Area. At the end of the road is Cockle Creek – the trailhead for the 85km South Coast Track, and as far south as you can go in Australia without a boat.

Derwent Valley to Lake St Clair

Upstream from Hobart, the River Derwent narrows, passing vineyards, hopfields and the antique-filled town of New Norfolk. Beyond the valley is snowy Mt Field National Park and Lake St Clair (Australia's deepest lake), at the southern end of Cradle Mountain-Lake St Clair National Park.

Richmond

Explore the town's Georgian streetscape, cross Australia's oldest bridge, check the Wine Wall and taste the cool-climate wines of the Coal River Valley.

Southern Midlands

Follow the Heritage Highway through rolling farmland to discover historic sandstone towns like Oatlands, Bothwell and Kempton. Sculptural silhouettes of convicts and bushrangers along the highway recall the region's storied colonial past.

LAUNCESTON AND NORTH

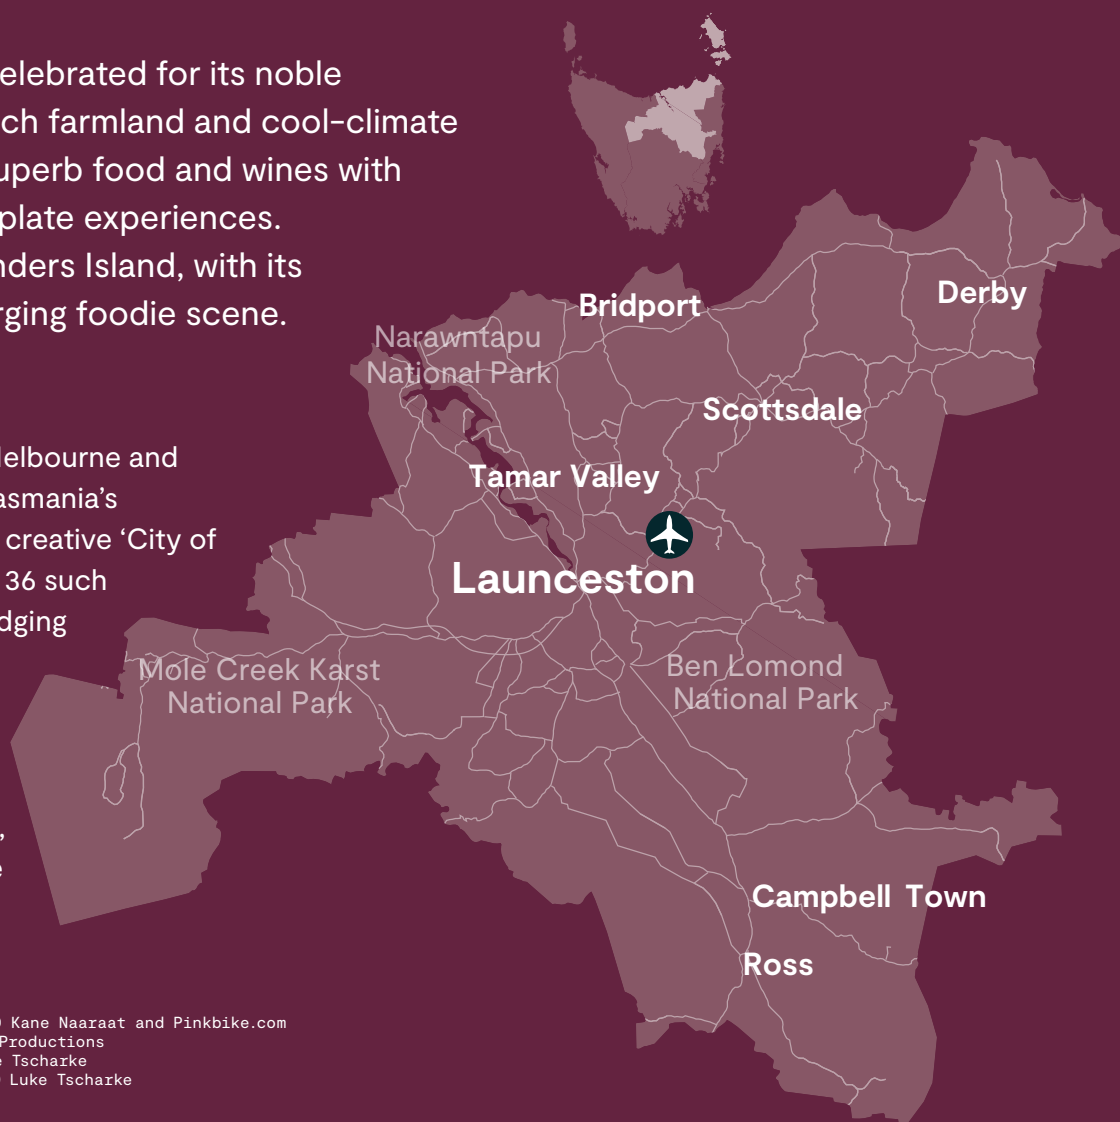

Stillwater
© Nat Mendham

Northern Tasmania is celebrated for its noble convict-built estates, rich farmland and cool-climate vineyards, producing superb food and wines with authentic paddock-to-plate experiences. Out in Bass Strait is Flinders Island, with its craggy peaks and emerging foodie scene.

Launceston

Just an hour's flight from Melbourne and 90 minutes from Sydney, Tasmania's northern hub is a UNESCO creative 'City of Gastronomy' – one of only 36 such cities worldwide, acknowledging the region's unique foodie culture. 'Launnie' also has some of Australia's best-preserved Georgian and Victorian streetscapes, and Cataract Gorge, a slice of downtown wilderness.

Tamar Valley

From Launceston, follow the Tamar Valley Wine Trail to visit the region's many cellar doors, bottling-up premium cool-climate pinot noir and sparkling wines. Beyond the vineyards are forested hills and farms, lavender fields and orchards.

Northern Midlands

Explore the picture-perfect villages of Longford and Evandale, home to heritage pubs, penny-farthing races and the UNESCO convict-built estates of Brickendon and Woolmers. Continue south for more history in Perth, Campbell Town and Ross along the Heritage Highway.

Derby

This mountain-biking mecca in Tasmania's north east was once a tin-mining town – now home to a 125km network of trails through temperate rainforest, called Blue Derby.

Flinders Island

Flinders is the largest of the 52 islands in the Furneaux Group, adrift in Bass Strait off Tasmania's north-east coast. With a population of 1000 islanders, rugged scenery and a growing reputation for distinctive paddock-to-plate produce experiences – including crayfish, abalone, scallops and quality lamb and beef – Flinders offers a true island-off-an-island experience.

Tackle the Western Wilds and Northern Forage road trips and see where the road takes you.

takayna / Tarkine

The world's second-largest tract of rare cool-temperate rainforest survives in this precious north-west wilderness. The two-day Tarkine Drive takes you into the wilds from Smithton; or base yourself in tiny Corinna on the Pieman River for walks, cruises and kayak trips.

Cradle Mountain

Meet the local wildlife on superb day walks in Cradle Mountain-Lake St Clair National Park – part of the vast UNESCO Tasmanian Wilderness World Heritage Area. Or propel yourself along the 65km Overland Track, either DIY camping or on a pack-free guided walk sleeping in private huts.

Strahan

On the remote west-coast shores of Macquarie Harbour, Strahan is the gateway to Franklin-Gordon Wild Rivers National Park and home to some great places to eat and drink. Strahan is also a launchpad for boats, planes and helicopters into the south-west wilderness.

King Island

Some 80km off Tasmania's north-west coast, King Island offers rugged coastline, famously good produce and seafood, a rich seafaring history and some of the finest golf experiences in the world: Cape Wickham on the rugged north coast, and Ocean Dunes on the west coast. Look forward to greens on the edge of the sea, with passing whales and seals as you tee off.

A topographic map of a mountainous region is spread out on a wooden surface. The map shows a river winding through a valley, with various contour lines and geographical features. A silver camera with a lens is positioned on the left side of the map. A dark, irregularly shaped rock sits on the map near the center. A single, dried, brown leaf lies on the wooden surface to the left of the map. The word "ITINERARIES" is printed in large, white, serif capital letters across the middle of the map. Two vertical white lines are drawn on the map, one above and one below the text.
